“I had been a health officer for a few months when I attended my first NACCHO conference, and what an eye-opener that was. It introduced me to the group of individuals who would become my professional family.”

—Barbara Worgess
Oneida County Health Department, NY

“The annual conference provides an opportunity for NACCHO members to discuss research needs, learn about cutting-edge research projects with practical application, and network with potential academic partners.”

—Patricia Sweeney
University of Pittsburgh, PA

“Being part of NACCHO puts you in touch with the best ideas in public health practice nationwide and resources that a small health department could never find on its own. There’s too much good information to pass up, and we learn from each other to make our communities better places.”

—Stephanie Carey
Montgomery Township Health Department, NJ

“NACCHO is my professional family.”

—Paul Erwin
University of Tennessee Center for Public Health, TN

“I would highly recommend NACCHO membership to colleagues. With being relatively new in the field, it has provided me with resources, information, and great networking experience.”

—Benjamin Jones
Waukesha County Public Health Division, WI

“NACCHO represents the best interests of local public health departments even when those interests may not necessarily be supported by state and federal agencies.”

—Cindy Trail
Central District Health Department (Region 4), ID

“NACCHO has provided our health department with valuable tools and resources otherwise lacking in our rural area. NACCHO has provided networking and training that have advanced my career and expanded my vision of public health.”

—Jeremy Phillips
Athens County Health Department, OH

“NACCHO provides guidance that pertains to local issues. NACCHO’s website provides best practices and other information that we actually put into practice. Individuals interested in becoming the best health department will see NACCHO as a valuable asset.”

—Kathy Lordo
Hamilton County General Health District, OH
