A network of volunteers

The 2015 Network Profile of the Medical Reserve Corps examines how the MRC network is changing over time, how new programs are affecting unit characteristics, and how the MRC program is contributing to the nation’s state of health and preparedness on a national scale. This report builds on the research from the 2013 Network Profile. Data from that initial report were invaluable, informing decision-makers, shaping future program goals, and sharing the impact the MRC has on the nation’s health and safety.
