THE "BLUEPRINT"

The Continuity of Care in Breastfeeding Support: A Blueprint for Communities

The Blueprint, developed with a public health lens, aims to increase local capacity to implement community-driven approaches to support chest/breastfeeding, centered on the needs of populations disproportionately impacted by structural barriers that lead to low rates of breastfeeding.

The goal of this resource is to ensure that chest/breastfeeding support services are continuous, accessible, and coordinated, and that community spaces are consistently supportive of chest/breastfeeding families.

WABANAKI PUBLIC HEALTH & WELLNESS

Bangor, ME

Wabanaki Public Health & Wellness in Maine serves four federally recognized tribes located in five communities: the Houlton Band of Maliseet Indians, the Aroostook Band of Micmacs, the Passamaquoddy Tribe at Indian Township, the Passamaquoddy Tribe at Pleasant Point, and the Penobscot Nation. Wabanaki supports future generations in their Maternal & Child Health Division by advancing the health and wellness of women, girls, and young children through healthy Wabanaki familial practices, literacy, and a focus on medical and spiritual capacity by promoting the bonding and love of the maternal and child spirits.

While Wabanaki began their second year of funding during year five of the REACH grant, their team took no time to operationalize and leverage REACH funding and aligned resources. In their first year under the grant, they have completed workplace requirements by finalizing the establishment of their own lactation space, a lactation policy, and developing a toolkit for tribal leaders.

As Wabanaki begins their second year, they are working alongside birthkeeping groups to continue strengthening community knowledge and support for birthgivers. Even more, WPHW is strengthening their Tribal Home Visiting Program to best determine how to support their tribal families across their distribution region and will work to build their lactation education and support before the program even begins seeing families. For more information on their organization and programs, please visit their website or network with Nancy Neptune at nneptune@wabanakiphw.org

ALLEGHENY COUNTY HEALTH DEPARTMENT

Allegheny, PA

Allegheny County Health Department has partnered with Healthy Start Incorporated in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania to improve birth outcomes for Black women, birthing people, and babies. Clients are connected to community health professionals and advocates, certified lactation consultants and counselors, doula and childbirth educators, licensed clinicians, and other public health practitioners. Their efforts consist of direct service, resource coordination, and systems change initiatives connected to policy and programs. While the goal is to ensure that all families have accessible and affordable quality care, they also partner with local medical professionals, businesses, and faith-based organizations to help reduce the county's infant mortality rate and the number of low-birth-weight babies.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH ADVOCATES (PHA)

Stockton, CA

Galatians Community Church hosted a March Madness Canned Food Drive where REACH hosted the official kick-off and presented certificates of participation on behalf of their HFB and Lactation Policies to the congregation.

The Public Health Advocates (PHA) been connecting with several faith-based organizations in their region with the goal of establishing dedicated spaces for breastfeeding parents to feed their infants and toddlers. Recently, they celebrated their lactation policy partnership with The Open Door House of Prayer (TODHOP) at their Mother Room Dedication.

The community and the faith facility's membership and staff excitedly welcome this policy change, as this lactation space will serve over 250 church members!

CITY OF WORCESTER

Worcester, MA

Creating a healthy baby network to support breastfeeding among Latino families in Worcester, Massachusetts

Between October 2019 and October 2022, the City of Worcester, Massachusetts REACH program partnered with the Worcester Healthy Baby Collaborative, the Family Health Center of Worcester (FHCW) and UMass Memorial Maternal and Fetal Medicine Department to support breastfeeding among Latino families. Together, the partners provided a network of bilingual/bicultural breastfeeding education and support services for Latino families at both healthcare agencies. FHCW hired bicultural/bilingual staff for its Centering Pregnancy prenatal education program, Baby Café breastfeeding support group, and Women, Infant, and Children program. Additionally, through this partnership, UMass Memorial Health Maternal Medicine hired a Community Health Worker to assist families with referral for community services and offered bicultural/bilingual lactation support services. These efforts reached more than 2,619 families, including 1,181 Latino families.
