

YOUTH AND COMMUNITY VIOLENCE PREVENTION ACTION TEAMS

OVERVIEW

The National Association of County and City Health Officials (NACCHO) with support from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), developed the Youth and Community Violence Prevention Action Teams (VPAT) to support up to 8 action teams.

PURPOSE

The goal is to leverage multisector partnerships to enhance existing violence prevention efforts in the selected communities by forming Youth and Community Violence Prevention Action Teams. The project aims to support new or existing action teams to develop plans that:

- 1) build capacity to implement violence prevention and intervention strategies using the best available evidence
- 2) reframe youth and community violence as a public health issue within their community.

ELIGIBILITY

This funding opportunity is open to jurisdictions with a high burden of youth and community violence, particularly those with above-average rates of firearm homicide. The core action team should consist of 6 members and include:

- Public health representative (required)
- Local elected government official representative (required)
- Local government agency representatives (at least 2 required)
- Community-based organizations (preferred, but not required)
- Youth and young adult representative(s) (preferred, but not required)

AT A GLANCE

FUNDING

- Seven (7) action teams will be awarded up to $30,000 to participate in the action planning process
- One (1) additional action team will be awarded up to $50,000 total to participate and serve as a host site for an in-person meeting
