National Association of County and City Health Officials’
Podcast from Washington

The Local and State Health Department Perspective on the COVID-19 Outbreak

Discussion with Dr. Crystal Miller, Public Health Director for the WEDCO District Health Department in Kentucky and Dr. Steven J. Stack, Commissioner for Public Health for the Commonwealth of Kentucky

Washington, DC, April 2, 2020 — On this week’s episode of NACCHO’s Podcast from Washington series, Ian Goldstein talks with NACCHO Chief of Programs and Services, epidemiologist Dr. Oscar Alleyne about his time in the Assistant Secretary for Preparedness and Response (ASPR) Emergency Operations Center. They also discuss the vital role of local health departments in the COVID-19 response.

Later in the program, Ian chats with the Commissioner for Public Health for the Commonwealth of Kentucky Dr. Steven J. Stack, a former president of the American Medical Association, and Public Health Director for WEDCO District Health Department in Kentucky, Dr. Crystal Miller. They discuss Kentucky’s response to COVID-19 at the State and local levels, including how local health departments are working with State partners to track the spread of the COVID-19 outbreak.
